Timothy J. Kehoe
Biographical Sketch

Tim Kehoe is originally from Newport, Rhode Island. He received his B.A. in Economics and Mathematics from Providence College in 1975 and his Ph.D. in Economics from Yale University in 1979. He has held teaching positions at Wesleyan University, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and the University of Cambridge in the United Kingdom. Tim has been a professor in the Department of Economics at the University of Minnesota since 1987, where he is currently a Distinguished McKnight University Professor. In addition, he is an adviser to the Federal Reserve Bank of Minneapolis. His research and teaching focus on the theory and application of general equilibrium models, especially in macroeconomics and international trade.

Tim advised the Spanish government on the impact of joining the European Community in 1986 and the Mexican government on the impact of joining the North American Free Trade Area in 1994. In 1997, working with a team from the Mexican consulting firm SAI Derecho y Economía, he designed a foreign trade and investment reform program for Panama. The Panamanian government enacted this program in 1998.

Tim has held visiting professorships at many universities, including the Barcelona School of Economics, the Centro de Estudios Monetarios y Financieros (CEMFI), the Fundação Getúlio Vargas in Rio de Janeiro, the Universidad de Alicante, the Universitat Autònoma de Barcelona, the Universitat de Barcelona, the University of California-Los Angeles, the Universidad Carlos III de Madrid, the Instituto Tecnológico Autónomo de México, the University of Maryland, El Colegio de México, the Norwegian School of Economics, the Universitat Pompeu Fabra, the Stockholm School of Economics, and Victoria University of Wellington. He has written over 135 books and scholarly articles and has supervised or co-supervised 124 Ph.D. theses in Economics. He has received numerous research grants and awards, including 9 multi-year grants from the National Science Foundation, and a major grant from the National Institute on Aging of the National Institutes of Health. He serves on the boards of numerous educational and research institutions and professional journals. Tim was elected President of Society for Economic Dynamics for 2015–2018 and President of the Society for the Advancement of Economic Theory for 2019.

Tim was made Doctor Honoris Causa by the Universidade de Vigo in 2008 and by the Universitat Autònoma de Barcelona in 2016. He was elected a Fellow of the Econometric Society in 1991, Miembro de Honor of the Asociación Española de Economía in 2010, and Economic Theory Fellow of the Society for the Advancement of Economic Theory in 2011. He was named Scholar of the College of the College of Liberal Arts at the University of Minnesota 2005–2008, and he was awarded the College of Liberal Arts Dean's Medal in 2013. In 2015, Tim received a Fellowship from the John Simon Guggenheim Memorial Foundation to write a book on the impact of foreign trade and investment liberalization focusing on the experience of Mexico. In 2021 the University of Minnesota Press published A Monetary and Fiscal History of Latin America, 1960–2017 edited by Tim and Juan Pablo Nicolini, the product of a major, eleven-year project funded by the Becker Friedman Institute at the University of Chicago.

Tim is married to Jean O'Brien-Kehoe, a Regents Professor and Distinguished McKnight University Professor of History at the University of Minnesota, who does research on, and teaches, American Indian History. Jean was elected Member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences in 2022. Jean and Tim live in Northeast Minneapolis.
